BC Budget

- Kalith:
  - In June.
  - Compiling data on what to talk about.
  - Talking to Cristina (last year’s VP External) about last year’s asks.
  - Four main asks:
    - Increased funding to Open Education Resources (OER’s), especially now with more education online.
    - Allocating emergency funding to student housing.
    - Increasing funding to the student loan program.
    - Transit solutions: a UBC-oriented project to help the economy.
• Cole:
  o Important to push for investment in public projects benefiting students, e.g., transit.
  o The COVID-19 situation can be an accelerant on these projects.
  o There’s an opportunity this year to do advocacy to push large infrastructure projects.
• Georgia:
  o Can send over information on OER’s.
• Kalith:
  o We expect a lot to be online now, a shift.
• Georgia:
  o Other universities have policies.
  o Something to look into: creation of a policy on OER’s.
• Cole:
  o The University is interested in collaborating with us on large infrastructure projects.
• Kalith:
  o Our policy and funding asks have to connect.

UBC and COVID

• Cole:
  o A lot of classes are going to be online this fall:
    ▪ The ratio is still to be determined, but it looks like a significant proportion will be online.
  o A lot of our advocacy is about how we can continue to support students in this time.
  o One issue is technological equity: making sure some students are not left behind because of technology.
• Georgia:
  o There needs to be a balance of asynchronous and synchronous classes so international students in other time zones are still being accommodated.
  o There are labour issues concerning TA’s.
  o Equity of access between those attending in person and those attending remotely.
  o Our big priority is the quality of education: making sure those attending remotely are still getting a quality education.
  o Ensuring adjustments to experiential aspects will be maintained.
  o Making sure Work Learn funding that is not being used will be reallocated to student-facing opportunities.
• Lucia:
  o Are we talking about reduction of tuition?
• Georgia:
  o There’s a good conversation to be had about the amount of resources put into quality online instruction.
  o As to reduction of tuition, if someone is not able to attend an in-person lab, they should not pay for in-person lab materials.
  o But still we’re committed to giving the University support to provide quality education.
  o The focus is on financial support for students.
• Cole:
  o The focus is on pragmatic things:
    ▪ How can we reduce other fees and costs to improve affordability?
    ▪ Emergency funding aid.
    ▪ Not necessarily about tuition.
    ▪ Targeting where we can be most effective: looking at additional costs that we can reduce.
• Georgia:
  o For instance, how can we reduce textbook costs or the cost of renting lab coats?

In-Person AMS Orientation
• Cole:
  o As we start reopening, we can do some in-person orientations.
  o Not as intensive as usual, because we’ve already done online orientations.
  o Keith and I are planning.
• Kalith:
  o Who would be attending?
• Cole:
  o Us, our staff, presenters.
• Keith:
  o In the Michael Kingsmill Forum: we can do social distancing there.

UBC Orientation for First Years
• Cole:
  o Things are looking good.
  o They’re talking of involving the AMS a lot more this year.
  o Will loop in Events and Communications.
  o What do we want to do? Have to decide.
  o There won’t be a lot of First Week activity: there will be few first years on campus.
  o What emphasis do we want to put on the First Year Kits?
  o Shipping the kits?
  o Something to start thinking about.
• Sylvester:
  o Will we not be getting First Week revenue?
• Cole:
  o No, the First Week Kits produce most of the revenue, so we should focus on that.
  o Going to have to talk more about this.
  o I think students who can’t be on campus will find it cool to buy a kit.
  o But maybe people will be trying to spend less money, and there won’t be a Welcome Back Barbecue ticket this year.
• Lucia:
  o How much do we make from the kits?
• Keith:
  o About $60,000.
  o We sell about 700.
  o That’s revenue. Gross, not net. Our net is $25,000 to $30,000.
  o It’s a good chunk of money.
  o Might look for online events to increase revenue.
• Kalith:
  o There’s potential.
  o Lots of students are active on social media.
  o There’s so many online groups.
  o We can build partnerships.
  o Can market first year kits.
• Sylvester:
  o I definitely agree.
  o Students can’t be on campus to feel university pride.
  o They’ll be hungry for what we can give them.

Adjournment
• The meeting was adjourned at 12:46 pm.
