THINGERY
A lending library of things

AMS Council – July 2021
The Thingery is the parent organization of neighbourhood Thingery branches. We’re a dedicated team of developers, designers and community organizers that focus on the development and ongoing operations of neighbourhood equipment lending libraries we call Thingeries.

A Thingery site is a neighbourhood equipment lending library housed in a modified shipping container. Each container is self-service, so members can check things in and out at their convenience.
Since 2016, The Thingery has been establishing sites in the Metro Vancouver region. The Thingery gives communities access to equipment that helps them pursue their passions, eliminating the need to own or store any of it.

We currently operate three sites in the Metro Vancouver region. Collectively, more than 500 Thingery members have access to over 300 pieces of equipment.
A Thingery helps create more resilient communities by reducing a person’s ecological footprint, strengthening social connections, and assisting in emergency preparedness.
Our work at UBC

In January of 2021, we engaged with over 69 students and 18 club representatives at UBC to better understand the demand for shared equipment.

This research demonstrated:

1. A high level of interest (81%) within the community to share more with their peers.
2. That participants consider The Thingery an initiative that would allow them to lower their ecological footprint and save money.
3. A large group of community members are willing to act as the initial working group for The Thingery’s development.
Engagement Survey Results

Students & Residents
We’ll begin our report with a breakdown of the demographics of students we engaged with through this survey.

Over 30% of respondents lived West of Alma Street.
Results - Demographics

What's your year of Birth (YYYY)?

62 out of 69 people answered this question

35 years – Was the average age for respondents who reported to work on campus.

25 years – Was the average age for respondents who reported to be a student at UBC.

Which of the following best describes you:

69 out of 69 people answered this question (with multiple choice)

- I’m a student at UBC: 63.8% (44 responses)
- I work at UBC: 37.7% (26 responses)
- I live in the community around UBC: 21.7% (15 responses)
- I work in the community around UBC: 4.3% (3 responses)
- Other: 1.4% (1 response)
Results - Demographics

14  How many years have you attended UBC?
43 out of 69 people answered this question

3 years – Was the average time a student reported to have attended UBC

16  How many years have you worked at/around UBC?
26 out of 69 people answered this question

1 year – Was the average time a respondent reported to have worked at/around UBC.

The Thingery has been working closely with the AMS since 2020 planning for a Thingery at UBC. During this planning process, The Thingery and AMS representatives have been soliciting input from students and stakeholders to ensure the Thingery pilot at UBC campus is a success.

To date we have engaged with:

- 69 students
- 18 clubs representatives
- AMS Operations Committee
- AMS Sustainability Committee

Next Steps

With the approval of the Thingery space within the AMS building, the Thingery team is ready to immediately start planning for the installation.

We’ll be working with members of the AMS team to secure a permit and then anticipating a launch in the fall of 2021.

1. Engagement and Design
   - Complete
   - Working with our local partners, we distribute an online survey to the local community. The survey provides important insights into design considerations, workshop ideas, equipment needs and levels of interest in volunteering.

2. Permitting
   - Currently Engaged
   - With the site design finalized, the Thingery will begin the permitting process with the necessary authorities. We can prepare the necessary CAD drawings and engineering specifications.

3. Establish Local Working Group
   - Summer 2021
   - Once a Thingery site has been issued permission to operate, we begin to establish the local working group. It typically takes 1-2 meetings to formalize the working group.

4. Donation Drive
   - Fall 2021
   - With the site design approved and the working group established, we launch a donation drive to source the equipment needed to launch. During this period, the site continues to be built.

5. Modifications and Inventory
   - Fall 2021
   - Once the space is framed out, we do the necessary modifications and inventory of all the donated equipment. This includes building the shelving units and installing our access control system.

6. Site Launch
   - Fall/Winter 2021
   - With the site, the working group, the equipment and the space prepared - the site is ready to launch!
