BACKGROUND

Established in 1996, the Innovative Project Fund (IPF) is an annual fund of approximately $35,000 provided by the University of British Columbia (UBC) and administered by the Alma Mater Society (AMS). The IPF supports the development of programs, projects, and ideas that enrich and enhance the university experience for students.

ELIGIBILITY

Applications will be accepted from current UBC students, campus community groups led by student organizations or clubs affiliated with the Alma Mater Society (AMS), the Graduate Student Society (GSS), UBC Faculties, or other officially recognized UBC organizations.

Applications must be submitted by UBC students as project leads, please note collaboration with faculty and staff is highly encouraged. All projects should prioritize student involvement and focus on student-led initiatives.

SELECTION CRITERIA

Proposals will be evaluated based on the following criteria:

- 1) INNOVATION: Projects must enrich and enhance the University for students and be highly innovative. This may include projects which solve pressing issues, provide new ways of doing things, or propose new ideas that haven't been tried at UBC before. Additionally, IPF will support projects which demonstrate a clear connection between the innovative idea and an identified gap, need, or opportunity on campus.
- 2) BENEFIT: Projects must provide benefit to a significant number of students. Projects need to provide evidence of the reach they will have to students, beyond those directly involved in the project, and demonstrate a compelling need for the project through student survey data or other forms of gap analysis.
- 3) VISIBILITY: Projects must be visible to the campus community. Projects need to be open, transparent, and accessible to campus and allow for broad engagement from the full community.

- 4) STUDENT INVOLVEMENT: Projects must involve students in the design, development, creation and implementation in significant and meaningful ways. For all faculty and staff proposed projects there needs to be a clear and compelling rationale provided for the ways in which students are involved in leading and contributing to the project.

FUNDING LIMITS

Maximum funding is $3,500 per project, per year. Applicants can submit proposals for the same project for a maximum of 3 consecutive years and can receive a maximum of $10,500 over those years. Projects lasting more than 1 year will need to reapply for funding each year.

Funds must be used within a 12-month period and cannot be carried forward without permission from the Committee. Funds that are unspent each year must be returned to the VP Students Office.

Any equipment purchased with IPF funds becomes property of the University. Any funds from the sale of equipment will be returned to the IPF.

The following types of projects have additional limits as follows:

- International Projects: Applications for projects that include sending individuals abroad must include an explanation of how the project will substantially enrich and enhance the University for students. Funds cannot be used to support learning and personal development for one/a small group of individuals. The IPF does not typically fund travel costs or airfare.
- Conferences: The IPF does not fund conference attendance for students. The IPF may provide funding to create a new annual conference for students and may fund new innovative projects that occur within an already existing annual conference.
- Competitions: The IPF does not fund sporting or design teams involved in competitions with other universities and/or non-UBC organizations and which involve relatively few UBC students. There are other sources of funding available for competitions via the AMS and the University.
- Honoraria & Salaries: The IPF does not fund honoraria or salaries for project members or students.
- Curriculum Projects: The IPF does not fund projects or activities that are in any way a part or extension of the academic curriculum at UBC, such as field trips or student attendance at academic conferences.

REPORTING

- A progress report is due approximately 6 months after your project is funded (a template will be provided) and a final report is due within 12 months of disbursement of funds (a template will be provided).
- The final report should highlight the project's successes, outcomes, impacts, and the benefits it brought to students and the University. The final report also must include a final budget and copies of all receipts. This report may be made available on the AMS website as an example to future applicants.
